THE CAMPBELL

BAR

Tucked away in a discreet corner of Grand Central Terminal, this space started in 1923 as the office of American financier and member of the New York Central Railroad's Board of Directors, John W. Campbell. At night, so he could spend more time with his colleagues and friends, Campbell turned his opulent office into a music recital hall, but after his death in 1957 the space fell into curious times. It evolved from a signalman's office to a jail to the transit police's gun storage to eventually a bar. In 2017, this iconic New York institution was respectfully restored to its original grandeur by Gerber Group. Returning the space back to an era when conversation, laughter and music fill the room.

Welcome to The Campbell Bar!
